

EFFECTS RECONCILIATION.

Thomas Thackston, aged 19 years, book-keeper of a local bank, who eloped to San Diego with a pretty long-distance operator of the Home Telephone Company, says a reconciliation has been effected between all parties concerned. He addressed a communication to the public, which reads as follows:

"To those who deem my recent marriage an escapade, and to those who are otherwise interested, I would like to state that my mother has no intentions of proceeding against me in an annulment case.

"An article published in a newspaper to that effect was a misrepresentation and all other would-be sensational accounts are pure fabrications. Side by side with this fact I would like to say that I intend to obtain a position where my matrimonial venture will prove an incentive to my success and not a detriment to my progress. The publicity of the affair has been a source of deep mortification to myself, mother and all others concerned, but things now rest in a state of harmony, and all parties being reconciled, I will cease to be disconsolate, and comfort a troubled mind and shattered hopes with a sage revelation: 'In the bright lexicon of virtue there is no such word as fall.' "